

Accredited visa sponsors

3,875 Australian companies approved to sponsor, on the priority list

These are not companies that might sponsor. Every one of them has been approved by the Department of Home Affairs to sponsor a work visa, and approved at the higher ACCREDITED level.

What accredited actually means

Home Affairs approves sponsors at two levels. Most are standard business sponsors. A smaller group is accredited, which a company earns by already holding sponsor approval and having a clean record with immigration and workplace law.

Accreditation buys them one thing that matters to you: priority processing. Their nominations and visa applications go to the front of the queue. Same visa, same rules, less waiting.

How to use this list

- 1 Find your sector
The list is grouped by industry, biggest first. Go to yours rather than starting at the letter A. There are 20 sectors.
- 2 Check they hire your role
Being a sponsor does not mean they are hiring today. Search the company name plus careers, and look at what they actually post.
- 3 Apply as a candidate, not as a visa case
Lead with the work you can do. Sponsorship is the last conversation, not the first one. They already sponsor, so you do not need to sell them on the idea.

A word on honesty. This list will age. Companies join and leave the register, and a name here is proof they were approved, not a promise they will sponsor you. Treat it as a shortlist of where sponsorship is already normal, which is a much better place to spend your applications than a job board.

The full register, searchable, free

This PDF is the accredited tier. The complete Home Affairs register holds 36,644 approved sponsors, and the whole thing is searchable on our site by industry and by state, at no cost.

aussiegradcareers.com.au/visa-sponsors

Filter by your industry and your state, switch on Accredited only to see the list in this PDF, or leave it off to see every company in Australia that can sponsor a work visa.

Where this came from Home Affairs does not publish the sponsor register as a download. It releases it on request. This list comes from that release, which is why it is a government record rather than a scrape of somebody else's website.
